Cuban Cigars

Cigars from Cuba are derived from tobacco components found throughout the country of Cuba: meaning the filler, the actual tobacco, and wrapper all come from different portions of the island. This may be why the Cuban cigar is considered to be the best, and why Cigar Aficionado magazine usually rates new Cuban cigars as the best. All cigar production in Cuba is controlled by the Cuban government. Unlike other cigar companies, where each brand is harvested and rolled in its own factory, all Cuban cigars are rolled in 2 or 3 different factories in Cuba. Cuban cigar rollers are famous for being the most skilled rollers in the world.

Cigar Reviews

Bolivar

Earthy and spicy notes are dominant without being aggressive. In the second third, the smoke becomes more rich and complex: earthy and spicy with a shadow of a black honey taste.

Cohiba

The Cohiba Siglo VI, known as corona extra resembles in this presentation the usual colours that clearly identify the brand and offers the choice to be tasted any time, in any ambience and in a good company.

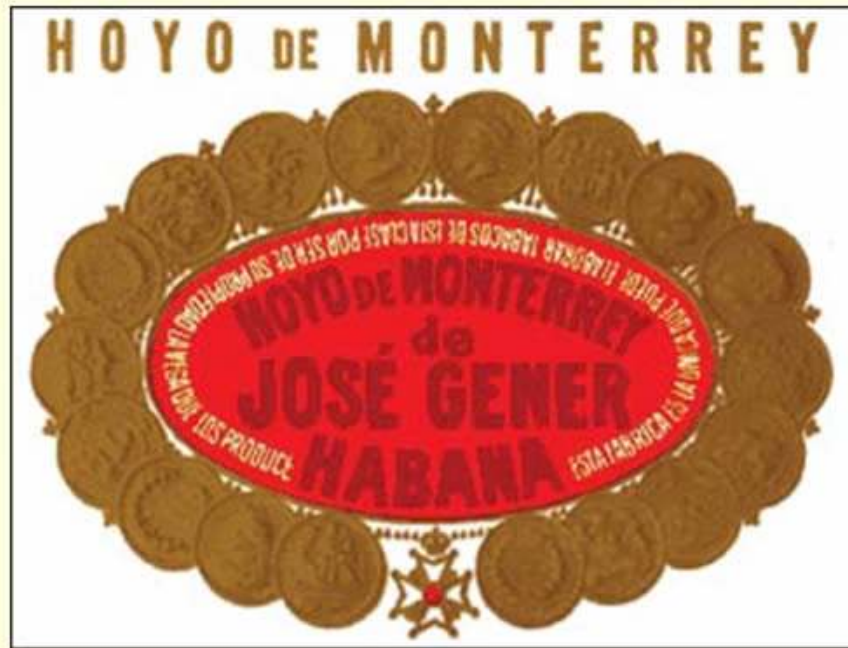

Upmann

This smoke has a very firm draw. It has cedar and bread notes, with a pleasant finish

Hoyo De Monterrey

An elegant cigar. It has a noble smoke. A pleasant sweet toasty taste, with hints of roasted nuts and aged cedar wood flavours.

Juan Lopez

Once again we are presented with one of the most classic formats. It's an excellent corona with a good aroma and it tastes great right up to the very end

Montecristo

One of the most famous Cuban cigars. You may like it or not, but you have to try it. A cigar with a core of earthiness, it has some light coffee bean flavours and a solid dry woody finish. A medium bodied cigar.

Partagas Churchill

The main impression is of a complicated cigar. It is strong, with intense aromas and flavours. Not for beginners

Quintero

The main impression is of a complicated cigar. It is strong, with intense aromas and flavours. Not for beginners

Romeo & Julieta

Presents the classic Romeo flavours; sweetness and cedar among others, perfectly balanced with a medium-bodied taste.
